where are we at?

Spring 2007 we are now a registered Scottish charity and a limited company. We have made presentations to five Local Authority Planning Departments to establish where our project meets most support, and we will begin looking for land within the next 18 months.

Over the last three years we received donations from over 130 individuals and £17,000 in grant awards. The interest continues to grow.

Our current aims include:

- Increasing membership, especially young people
- Establishing an office base - employing a project manager; administrator; and education officer
- Further presentations to Local Authorities and Housing Associations with a view to partnership
- Providing training in Permaculture; Non-Violent Communication; and Ecology
- Honing skills in 5 Rs (Recycling, Reusing, Refusing, Reducing and Repairing) and carrying out site-specific feasibility studies

how can I get involved?

Whether you are attracted to living in the village or simply want to support the project, we greatly welcome your contributions of enthusiasm, experience, skills and money. To become a Bodhi supporter please complete the contribution form overleaf.

We have an ongoing programme of events where we would be delighted to meet you:

- Training events in permaculture, non-violent communication and ecology
- Retreats
- Festivals
- An ecovillage design study group
- Presentations/stands at large events

together we can make this real!

- ♥ in an eco-village amidst the natural beauty of Scotland
- ♥ affordably owning/renting your eco-home on communally owned land/resources
- ♥ with others who meditate and practice kindness, generosity, honesty and simplicity in their daily life
- ♥ in a predominately vegetarian village, growing some of our own food and conserving land and water
- ♥ with access to arts and crafts studio facilities and shared exhibition and performance spaces
- ♥ with minimum waste and carbon emissions and caring for the earth's resources through renewable energy systems
- ♥ with a shared transport system
- ♥ with people of all ages and from a diversity of life styles
- ♥ on the basis of consensus decision making in combination with an elected village council
- ♥ sharing our experience with the wider community through work, education, and celebratory events
